

New My Royals

Home British Sweden Wedding Denmark Dutch Spain Monaco Belgium Norway Luxembourg Other

Home > MONACO ROYAL

Prince Albert and Princess Charlene Visit Children Supported by the MLD Association

by Helen - May 24, 2025 32 Comments

For the past 14 years, the Monaco Liver Disorder (MLD) Association has offered a special viewing area on a terrace at Quai Albert I, allowing around thirty young patients suffering from serious conditions to enjoy a day at the Monaco F1 Grand Prix. On May 23, 2025, Prince Albert II and Princess Charlene visited these children at Quai Albert I. For this visit, Princess Charlene wore a painted striped cotton shirt dress by Sara Roka.

Founded in 2011 by Carla Fadoul Shechter, the MLD Association is dedicated to combating rare pediatric liver diseases, such as biliary atresia, while also raising significant awareness about

Most Popular

Prince Albert and Princess Caroline Attend Premiere of Documentary at Monte-Carlo Opera

April 30, 2025

Queen Máxima Pays a Working Visit to Cape Town, the Capital of South Africa

May 20, 2025

King Frederik and Queen Mary Attend BusinessEurope Gala Dinner in Copenhagen

May 22, 2025

Royals Attend the Inauguration Mass of Pope Leo XIV at the Vatican

May 18, 2025

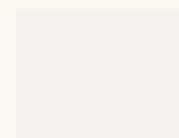

Prince Albert and Princess Charlene Attend Practice Session Ahead of the 2025 Grand Prix

May 25, 2025

Prince Albert and Princess Charlene Attend a Meeting with the Local Media

May 14, 2025

Prince Albert and Princess Charlene Visit Children Supported by the MLD Association

May 24, 2025

organ donation. The organization supports sick children and their families by providing moral, logistical, and human support during hospitalization periods.

On the evening of May 22, 2025, Prince Albert II and Princess Charlene also attended the official reception for the 82nd Monaco Grand Prix, held in the Cour d'Honneur of the Prince's Palace. The 2025 Monaco Grand Prix (officially known as the Formula 1 TAG Heuer Grand Prix de Monaco 2025) will take place at the Circuit de Monaco on May 25, marking the 82nd edition in the circuit's history.

sara roka

www.newmyroyals.com

Sara Roka Drareen90 Shirt Dress

Giorgio Armani Shiret Crystal-embellished Silk Top

MONACO ROYAL

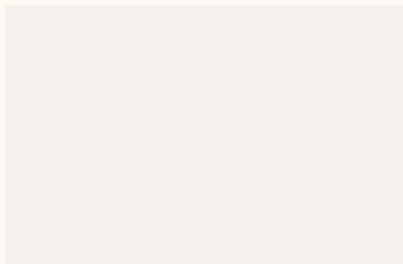

PRINCESS CHARLENE

ROYAL FAMILY

Royal Fashion

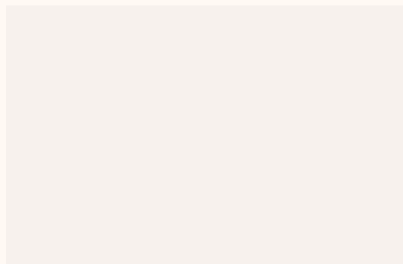

You might like

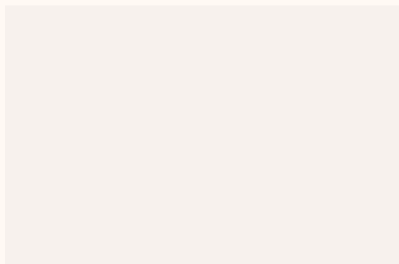

Prince Albert and Princess Charlene Attend Podium Ceremony of the 2025 Grand Prix

May 25, 2025

Charlotte Casiraghi and Princess Alexandra Attend F1 Grand Prix Qualifying Session

May 25, 2025

Prince Albert and Princess Charlene Attend Practice Session Ahead of the 2025 Grand Prix

May 25, 2025

32 Comments

Anonymous 24/5/25 02:59

Ainsi vêtue et coiffée Charlene paraît 10 ans de plus.

Reply

missy 24/5/25 05:08

lovely surprise of colorful prints. bring back the pixie hair cut, it suited her more

Reply

Anonymous 24/5/25 12:21

I do prefer her present hairstyle, it makes her look soft and feminine - whereas that pixie cut made her look masculine and hard. She looks so pretty with her longer hair, good haircolour and that chic summerdress.

Anonymous 24/5/25 21:46

I agree. Her current hairstyle is really aging her.

Anonymous 25/5/25 10:33

Probably she wants to grow her hair and this is that difficult in between stage.

Anonymous 24/5/25 05:39

I really don't like her hair anymore. Short hair suited her so well. This makes her look old. Maybe her hairdresser thinks it makes her look elegant. I don't know. She is such a beautiful woman and I always liked the modernity she brought to her role. I also think black is not her color.

Reply

Anonymous 24/5/25 09:40

I disagree with you. She doesn't look old, in my opinion Charlene looks elegant and fresh.
Stephanie

AnnieM 24/5/25 10:36

I love her hair like this, especially as worn for the formal function. It's elegant and versatile, though, of course, she undoubtedly also looked great with the pixie cut. Nice to see her in bright colours for a change

Anonymous 24/5/25 10:46

Eh, he-hmm, what's wrong with looking old?! Eternal youth does not bring wisdom nor experience, nor more joy nor more beauty. As an older person :- ) I notice and regret when it's used as a criticism! But besides all that .... Charlene is late 40s, not 20, and certainly does not look her age after such an investment in her skin and face shape. I love her hair like this, and think it suits her so well. I always found the very short styles a bit severe, whereas this is soft. I'm loving the updos!

P. the original 24/5/25 11:12

All of these ageist comments sound really so OLD to me!
What is that, after all?
An incremental repetition of some kind and what for?
Princess Charlene and other royal ladies:
their hair ,their choices.
As simple as that.

Anonymous 24/5/25 12:23

Agree with Stephanie.

Anonymous 24/5/25 14:31

It seems to me that some always need to find fault. When her hair was short, the comments were actually cruel at times. The truth is that she looks good with both short and long hair. Not all women can pull off long and short hair. She is probably growing her hair out now, which is always an awkward time. If so, she has found an elegant solution to the transition.

Anonymous 24/5/25 18:16

1431 this blog does not find fault merely expressing how hair, clothes, style has a different visual impression on different people. I would suspect that seeing some of these ladies in person we would have a different opinion again. It is after all just a photograph

Anonymous 25/5/25 02:11

Anon 18:16 Of course people find fault. How would you characterize the comment saying her hair makes her look old? It is an insult. She looks anything but old. Many of the people that comment here do not like any change, whether it is in clothes and accessories, hair or makeup. No one will get it right every time, but the fact that they are willing to try new things is good. There is no good excuse to wear the same style clothes and same hair style for what amounts to a lifetime. All these women have the means to update their appearance, and it can be done in a way that is age and status appropriate. What is making them "look old" is giving up on their appearance. I hope the pattern of suddenly freezing their style in their forties had ended with the younger royals.

Anonymous 24/5/25 07:20

Princess Charlene is wearing a beautiful shirt dress. Not with little flowers, but a beautiful summery print. I don't like long dresses, but in this case the dress is meant to be worn like this (pic. of the model) and it suits the princess.

Reply

Anonymous 24/5/25 14:31

This, exactly!

canadian fan 24/5/25 07:20

I like her dress. It is nice to see her in bright colours.

Reply

Anonymous 24/5/25 07:42

Her shoes always look too small for her feet

Reply

P. the original 24/5/25 14:24

May I ask you on what evidence/ sources grounds do you base your comment? You know, I kind of feel personally involved as my feet are well shaped and long and I have never been noticed for my "small "( do you mean narrow or uncomfortable or what else?) shoes.
Or simply, I was noticed for more attractive parts in my body than my feet lol!!
I must confess that I often get lots of compliments for my shoe choices, though..

Anonymous 24/5/25 08:21

Toujours ce doux sourire au milieu d enfants.
Froufrou

Reply

P. the original 24/5/25 09:54

How heartwarming to see the princely couple visiting these children!
P. Charlene simple shirt dress and the so called makeup no makeup effect were the best choice.
Well done.

Reply

Achard62 24/5/25 09:58

Je suis surprise agréablement par cette robe chemise aux couleurs très estivales mais heureusement qu'elle est grande car ses chaussures sont juste visibles !

Reply

Anonymous 24/5/25 10:22

Her hairstyle does not make her old, it does make her just not look good or her optimum which is not *quite* the same as old. Also, I don't understand why people always blame the stylist when we don't even know of the person has one, and even if yes: the decision is Charlene's only. I don't like this dress and slowly it downs on me, why I don't like most patterned dresses recently: It is a dislike connected with the length of the skirt. If long, everything is simply too much (but of course: IMHO), even this otherwise pretty print. She is always smashing in black (and white) and her suit is no exception. Red lipstick would have been smashing with it (as it is mostly on her).

Reply

Anonymous 24/5/25 10:50

I enjoy thinking about materials and styles together. I don't love the very patterned styles with copious amounts of fabric (wide skirt, waist tie etc) ... but how different this print would look with a short sleeved, fitted shape, to the knee. You've made me think, it's the combination of busy print + too much fabric that I don't think looks great. The shape alone is fine, the fabric alone is fine, but not combined.

Anonymous 24/5/25 14:56

@Anon 10:50, yes, exactly this, happy to read that it is not only me. Funny that otherwise great design houses don't seem to make this connection. Of course, on their super slim and super tall models all this overflow looks much more tolerable than on an average, somewhat curvier and smaller woman.

Anonymous 25/5/25 09:30

Well the great design houses follow or try to make new trends - for profit - so they are rarely placing great sophisticated classic beauty and longevity of beautifully balanced dresses over the desire to sell! Some might. But mostly anyone who is "on trend" is doing what sells.. even if it looks ludicrous to those of us who much prefer classic over trend!

Anonymous 24/5/25 11:26

Les coloris de la robe apportent de la fraîcheur mais je ne suis pas certaine qu'elle convienne à la princesse. En tout cas je ne suis pas emballée par la longueur et les motifs. La tunique Armani est très élégante, elle pourrait convenir aussi avec un pantalon blanc. Paloma.

Reply

Anonymous 24/5/25 11:47

Je trouve cette robe jolie. Il est vrai que si elle était moins longue, elle serait plus belle. Les couleurs sont harmonieuses.

Par contre, je n'apprécie pas beaucoup ce style de pantalon.

Dans l'ensemble, je constate que la douce Princesse Charlene de temps à autre ose des couleurs d'une part. D'autre part, elle aborde jupe, robes, pour son plus grand plaisir. Je suis très heureuse de la voir.

Je remarque néanmoins que cette douce princesse semble perdre du poids. De telle sorte que cela est remarquable.

J'espère de tout cœur que cette perte de poids est volontaire, et non involontaire. C'est-à-dire causée par une situation de stress, ou autres. Dans ce second cas, je lui souhaite de la surmonter, afin de retrouver une meilleure forme.

-Astrid.

Reply

Anonymous 24/5/25 15:21

I like the colours of this dress and the style but for some reason it looks odd on her. Perhaps it is the way her hair is styled, not flowing enough to balance the full skirt. Also the skirt seems to be more full than on the model, maybe thats it. A nice bright lipstick would tie everything together. It just seems like all you see is the dress not her, she seems faded into the background. Odd

Reply

Anonymous 24/5/25 15:23

I must say I like the new trend of A-line skirts and dresses. I think them reminiscent of the '50's style. The color contrasts on HSH dress are eye catching. I hope we see more of our royal ladies in this style.

The Armani top is lovely, and a perfect item to wear for an evening event. HSH really has got her fashion mojo back.

Lowri.

Reply

Anonymous 24/5/25 19:37

Princess Charlene is a very beautiful women - both looks are well chosen.

MESH

Reply

Anonymous 24/5/25 20:08

This is a very nice look for Pss Charlene. Nice for summer, also the black suit is spot on.

CSS

Reply

Enter Comment

< Previous Post

Next Post >

Contact - Info & Privacy Policy